Important News! War at Hand!!

A variety of important and interesting intelligence will be found under the Telegraphic headthis marning. The Ballie brings the decisive fact that the Emperor of Russia has rejected the English and French ultimatum; that the fact of this rejection was sheady known in London and Parie; and that the receipt of the Czar's official note, daily expected, would, would be the signal forthe formal declaration of war.

Ere init, therefore, the great struggle has commeaced in Europe, and the confinent, after years of peace, resounds once more with the din of wine. The contest will be a fearful one, and most costly in blood and treasure. May an overraling Providence preserve our favored country from being drawn into its devastating whirlpool!

All Hail Connecticut?

It will be seen from our telegraphic dispatche that the Prenez administration and the authors of the Nebraska Iniquity have received another stinging rebuke from the Freemen of Connecti-CLT. That state, which has been carried by the Somes Democracy for several years in succession has now repudiated these pretenders and returned to the whig faith. The Legislature just elec-

FROM OUR N. Y. CORRESPONDENT.

NEW YORK, March 30.

Later news from Europe contradict the rumor by the previous steamer, of the fall of Kalafat while shedding no more light on the War ques tion. Western Europe & at war with Russia -a witness its firets and armaments, sailing for the Baltic and the Black Sea—and yet no declaration of war is made on either side and up to our lates ac ounts no blood had been shed. But the sending such a fleet into the Baltic, as England ha placed under the command of Nariez and the fact that Napiez has the command, indicate t purpose of striking such a blow at Russia as will make even the Northern Colossus stagger. Caon MIADY, the scaport at once and citadel of St. Pe mersburg, is supposed to be the object of the British ettack. Sir Charles Narize, at a public disher to him, on his appointment to the commun said that although war was not yet declared, he would make war on repching the Baltic and th first Lord of the Admiralty, who was present, said that the Admiral and his full consent to do 40. Nupler is a man very likely to keep his prom is e and as there is no other important stroke to he made against Russia in the Baltic, except at Constant, that would seem to be his purposefor in order to a strict blockade of Russian Contuetce, no such vessels as ships ranging from 90 to 129 gons, would be employed. Now as to Cron--tuit itself-it is not an easy conquest; for allice by astural position and the skill of the Engineer, at is a very strong place. The city and fortressdistant about 20 miles west from St. Petersburgstands on the extremity of a sandy island in the guif of Finland, and has a population of perhaps 50,000, exclusive of garrison. Its shape is triangular and being deemed the military outpost of the Capital, as well as its commercial hartor is very strongly fortified; the channel is very narrow, and the batteries of the city and of a detacked islet off its Southern point, as well as those of Riesbank and the Castle of Cronstadt, render its navigation very perilons. The houses, however, are mostly of wood and can therefore be easily fired by shells. Artificial ports constructed in re capable of and the chief commerce of Russia is carried on Iron this point.

But the fall of Cronstadt, although it would cripple the usval and commercial resources of Rusels, would not open the way to the Capital, for the Nevz, though rapid, is not deep at its entrance ate the culf of Finishd and vessels of more than S feet depth are seldom employed in its waters. All that Russia has, however, of fleet in the Baltic is probably at Cronstadt, and the eapture of them and it would be a great feat of war, and that, I think, Narica means to accomplish and will ac complish. Of the land forces of England and Finnee and their destination, and probable field of operations, nothing neems yet settled, or at least

Meantime Commerce seems not to be alarmed: the English funds sustain themselves well and even new loans from France and Austria do not Irighten Capitalists. How the Peace once broken is to be restored, and when and at what cost, it would be presumptuous indeed to attempt to foraelisdow. Auxiety seems to have existed in London lest the U. S. should furnish men and cruisers that under Russia letters of marque might, after the commencement of hostilities; prey upon British Commerce. This I look upon as an idle fear, if not altogether, at least to some extent ; for our symmathics as a People are with the Western Nations and against Russia in this quarrel, and when popular sympathies do not prompt to fitting corsairs, they will not be fitted out in any appreciable number. But the closing of the Baltic ann the Black Sea ports to the export of Russian products will have the effect infallibly of enhancing the price of breadstuffs in Europe; and if by any family this year should also turn out one of sho crops there, there reight be fearful suffering from the scarcity of breadstuffs, even with all that at the highest prices could be drained from our fruitful soil. At any 1ste, it strikes me as a sure calsulation from our Farmers to plant the greatest breadth of land possible with Corn, and if there be yet time to sow Spring Wheat, for both will

The Legislature has Adjourned?

So it is, and the people may well rejoice at it. Considering the character of the controlling majority, and the influences brought to bear upoumany who were not of the party of the majority, but whose vote could frequently be had as occasion served, it was only a wonder that both Houses did not declare themselves in permanence, and sit till their successors are elected and qualified, and even then refuse to yield their places .-They might have helped themselves to the necesary money from the school fund, or have voted new state loan; neither any scruples of conscience, nor regard to the constitution, would have prevented-for of either there was little or none. This may be strong language; it is strong anguage, but not one whit stronger than is justified by facts. It is such language as is used by members—and members elected as "democrats."

too-of that Legislature, The few strictly honest men in either House atood no chance at all. In the Senate, those who attempted to stem the tide were truthlessly voted down, the majority, (a part of whom acquired at " rolten row"—it is no phrase of our coining) -sitting in their seats, with taunt and bitter scorn, till the few had uttered their protest, and then voting them down, and laughing at them afterward. In the Assembly, hose who were disposed to the honest had a somewhat better chance, and succeeded in two or three cases in foiling the more monstrous designs of the plotters; but generally enough of them were so bound hand and foot by the pendency of oills in which they or their constituents were interested—and which bills were kept pending to the last moment so as to compel them to submission—na to change the result upon any measure in which the Senate majority was determined .-There were men in both Houses—a faithful fewwho stood up manfully through all and against all the unboly influences brought to bear upon them, and they will bear homewards the pleasing consciousness of having done their duty. But such men were comparatively few and powerless, and the many ruled. We do not busitate to say that for unblushing acts of corruption and attempts (and we believe successful ones) at downright bribery-for the most astonishing acts of extravagance in the use and abuse of the hardearned money of the people-for the depletion of the treasury by the payment of all old trampedup claims, rejected a dozen times before-for the oubling up of salaries of officers, and the cacation of new offices (a part of which increase we acknowledge to have been well done if it had been done rightly; but the Senate refused, though the House consented, to cut off the illevalues.)or the most constant and determined log-rolling, by which even well meaning members were made cols in the hands of others-for an utter disre gard of the wishes of the people who sent them to Madison, and subserviency to the commands of outside workers-in fact, for generally doing what they ought not to have done, and neglect ing what they ought to have done, this Legisla ture far surpassed nyawhich have gone before it, and has surpassed even the fears of those who new best into whose bands the state has fallen When the people shall come to know the fel! seasure of the iniquity of their servants, we shall probably hear from them : that is, if they have not given up in despair, and determined to submit to such things without a murmur. We shall do our part to give the people the facts. Meanwhile, let them consider what would have been the consequence of handing over a grant of 3,000,000 acres of lands to such a body of men, so constituted land so influenced !

Another Arrest in the Rescue Case.

Charles K. Watkins, Esq. who has been abent since the rescue of the slave in attending the Iown Circuit, and at Madison, was acrested by tlic Marshal yesterday morning. Mr. Waterns went quietly before the Commissioner, and on heing presented with the charge against him, arose and stated that he supposed he understood the offence with which he was charged, and then addressed the Commissioner as follows.

[We have been furnished by Mr. WATERS with copy of his remarks:]

If it be an offence that I visited a man in prison, then am I guilty. If it be a crime to sympa-thize with those who are in affliction, then I am not ambitious to appear altogether innocent. It is true that when sent for, I visited a man in pais-on. It is true when the prisoner told me that he had been knocked down with clubs, beaud in anima and times to the prisoner to the prisoner told me. had been snotzed down with chost reand in chains and dingged in an inclement night, without covering upon his head, and with scarce any clothing upon his person, to a distant jail, I did not approve the act. It is true that when I saw the steins of blood from his bleeding wounds, I was not wholly insensible to his sufferings and wrong. But that I advised him that he could have a fair trial by Jury or that his case would be heard by an impartial Court, I deny. His complexion forbid the one, and I should have been false to my convictions if I had given him any assurance of the other. The raily consolation I did or could give him was his right to the writ of haleas corpus, and I explained to him that such writ was a writ of right, a writ that the fagitive slave act bad not taken away, and the only right that was left to a man of his complexion under his accusation. That by it he could have the legality of his arrest inquired into, and that if pistols and deadly vecapons were the only means by which he had been taken and was confined, he could be liberated, but that if these were solly insensible to his sufferings and means by which he had been taken and was con-fined, he could be liberated, but that if these were accompanied by the process of a Court of compe-tent jurisdiction it would justify his arrest, and that his personal injuries were merely formal in-cidents to the most approved mode of service of it. The benefits of this with I vouchsafed to se-ture to him. It was applied to the control of the conit. The benchis of this with I voundssied to secture to him. It was applied for against the Sheriff who actually held him under restraint, and the writ was defeated by the return in fiction of law that he was in the legal custody of the Marshal. Another writ was applied for and served upon the Marshal. To this, according to local precedent, there was open and avowed disobedience, and the prisoner disappointed was without hear Assay. prisoner, disappointed, was without hope. As a last resort, application was made to Judge Miller, and though too penarious to be entirely housest, too willou to be ordinarily just, same hope was entertained of elemency from his cowardice; but while the latter did not foracke him, he was not presented of the former and he refused are interested.

possessed of the former, and he refused any inte-ference, persisting that the Marshai ought net-abey the writ of habess corpus from a State Courand that he would not then entertain the case himself.

When this had all transpired, I do now here When this had all transpired, I do now here confess that I did to a large and respectable concourse of people, state what of facts I have here stated. I do confess that I vindicated the right of the writ of habeas corpus. That I declared it to be the great bulwark of personal liberty.—That there was no man so obscure that it could be denied to him, none so high as to refuse obscience, and all obedience to it refused, and all means had been exhausted to enforceit, I do further confess that I made a public acknowledgment from the top of a fence post that I had proceeded in the law as fer as I had any howledge of the practice, and that as counsel for the prisoner, I left it for others to proceed in the case according to their sound judgment; and I understand that the prisoner is satisfied with the mannor in which they conducted his ease. Now, Mr. Commissioner, to all this I confess, and plead not with the contribution of the contribution of the confess, and plead not with the contribution of the contribution of the contribution of the confess, and plead not with the contribution of the contri are the wift of hadeas corpus as the safest pro-ection of our prison houses as well as of the likrtv of the chizen.

Mr. Watkins gave ball in the sum of $2,000 for his appearance at the July term of the U. S. Court at Madison; Mr. Townsond, of the firm of Townsend & Finkler, becoming his security.

The amendment of Mr. Hoan to the bill abolishing the New York Traveling Immigrant Agencies, which were mentioned yesterday as likely to continue those agencies for at least another year, is now generally conceded not to have that effect. It was so intended at the time undoubtedly, but in the opinion of most who have examined it, it will not answer the intended purpose.—Madison Journal.
